The World and His Wife

A Dramatic Film Romance Featuring

ALMA RUBENS

WHO'S WHO IN "THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE"

ALL-STAR
Don Julian	Montagu Love
Ernesto	Gaston Glass
Don Severo (Julian's brother) Mercedes (his wife)
Don Alvarez	Charles Gerard

WATCH FOR THIS STORY IN MOTION PICTURES

"The World and His Wife" soon to be seen in motion pictures at the best theaters, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Arteraft picture from the play by Charles Frederick Nirdlinger, founded on the dramatic verse of Jose Echegaray.

By Jane McLean.

E raised a hand in protest. "No, I am right. Love sufare not as you were. Before your brother came into this house and insisted that Ernesto could not be merely a friend, you have changed; you cannot deceive me. There is something calling away at your heart—I have felt it—a dark something is creeping over us. I have dreaded it ever since Don Severo's wife tried to make me confess that I was not a good wife."
"She meant well," said Don Se-vero hoarsely, unable to cope with the gathering blows from the lips of Teodora. "But you, my husband, the one who promised to love and cherish me, the one I promised to honor and obey—you let her say this—" He sipped his tea in silence, having no answer to make, ashamed of himself, not knowing what to do. At this moment a company of street strollers paused outside the iron grating of the patio and began to sing a ballad popular at the time. Though never, alas! too old to yearn Old age is not for love, oh no! For youth to youth will ever turn And laugh at age that will not

Voices Mock Julian.

Paying no attention at first, the words began to burn into the brain of Don Julian like coals of fire. He flushed. "Voices everywhere," he cried, "mocking at me!" And, calling a servant, he pointed to the singers. "Send them away."

Silence succeeded his outbreak. The man and the woman watched the street singers depart laughing as though it were a joke on this man of middle age and his young

And, coincident with their departure, entered Don Severo. Bowing to Teodora, "Well, well," said he, "I have some news. Ernesto is going to South America not a week hence as he planned, but "I have told Julian how sorry I am," said the wife. "We are driving him away—unjustly."

Into the face of Julian came again the cruel look of suspicion; for the first time in their married life he turned upon her with a hattake, and the sight of his anger brought tears to her eyes. Tears that he wholly misinter-preted. "Ah, you are sad, tears of blood are wrung from your heart "Yes," she met his eyes unflinching, conscious of her own purity, "because my heart is breaking, Julian." He staggered back; not for the glimmer of a second did the reflec-tion come to him that he was the man she referred to; no, it was plain to him that her heart was breaking for this poet, the youth he had introduced into his house out of charity. Teodora did not speak further; her idol was breaking before her; she had no more to say; she walked away, hoping against hope that Don Julian would call her back.

But no sound came from him till she had left the room, then in passionate outbreak he poured forth his sorrow to Severo, cursing himself for his blindness and wonder ing in broken sentences whether Teodora would dare to tell him she no longer cared for him.

Teodora groping mentally for a refuge from this net of calumny being drawn about her, almost fell into a chair weeping tears of disil-

Faith Is Broken.

Before her stood Mercedes, "Tell me everything, my dear," said the cold voice; "see, I have destroyed the statue of Ernesto that you may the more quickly forget him." Teodora rose. "You are a wicked woman; I have nothing to tell you. Go out of my sight and do not let me see you again; you poison my She resumed her seat, but there were no more tears; she had been suspected of wrongdoing by her own husband; the magic bond of faith that bound them together had been broken not by her but by him. Henceforth he would not trust her again and she-she shook her head in despair.

The beginning of the end of the house of Gorgas was at hand; like Samson, Julian had pulled down the pillars and buried his faith and his heart in the ruins. Henceforth his life was to be a round of horror, a!ways wondering, always mistrust-

In Congress By Edith McDowell-Wise.

(Copyright, 1920.) CARL VINSON OF GEORGIA.

(A Limerick.) THERE was a young bachelor named Vinson, Whom the writer found most convincin'; For with very little grace he shut the door in her face And with writers would have no

This Southern young Georgian LOOKS jolly! But in five minutes made me melan-

Refused to be quizzed-said to mind my own biz, And suggested I take the trolley..

So his secret remains in his breast As to why he hasn't a "nest; And will always stay there, so far as she cares. For he refused to talk even in jest.

This Day in History.

This is the anniversary of the first partition of Poland, in 1772, when Russia, Prussia and Austria each took a section of that unfortunate country rendered powerless by internal dissension to oppose its powerful neigh-

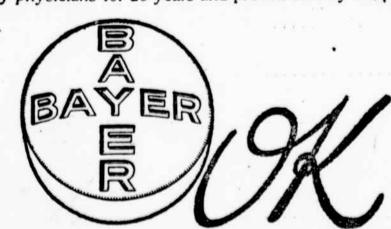

CONG. CARL VINSON.

Why We Eat Vegetables.

The great benefit derived from eating fresh green vegetables is due to their potent action in removing wast matter from the blood ves WARNING! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on tablets, you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for 20 years and proved safe by millions.

SAFETY FIRST! Accept only an "unbroken package" of genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," which contains proper directions for Headache, Earache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, and for pain generally. Strictly American!

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents-Larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticachiester of Salicylicacta Teodora, Alma Rubens, in the new and dramatic motion picture, "The World and His Wife," hears again the voice of gossip, as her sister-

T) TAKE on myself the responsi-

Mason was one thing. To face the actual fact that I had sponsored a had endangered the possessions of Jim's friend was another,

This came to me with growing force all through the morning after Daisy had gone to take charge of Tom's antique shop. My warrant of Daisy's honesty was dishonest.

I was playing fairy-godmother at Tom's expense. The ethics of what I had done seemed questionable to One thing was clear, however. If had it to do over I'd have to do

I put in a miserable morning and started off in a pretty unhappy mind after lunch to call for Uncle Ned and Aunt Mollie. Driving the car wasn't a pleasure process, but for their sakes, I felt I must do it. In a traffic block, as my car stood still waiting for a side street to empty itself across the avenue, my attention was attracted from idle staring to half-awakened but eager interest. On the curb, waiting like me stood a girl dressed in black, unnoticeable but for the uneasy way she was watching me out of to hide something or some one from my notice. Naturally, as soon as I became aware of that I focussed my attention on the girl and tried that the girl who was watching me so uneasily and trying to pretend that she wasn't watching me at all was Bertha, my ex-maid. On the inner side of the walk, instead of the outside, where he would naturally be, stood a man. He was slight, slim, pale and stoop-shouldered, and wore a broad-visored cap pulled down so its shadow made denly he seemed to become conscious of Bertha's attempts to block him from view. At once he turned and stared past her through eyes narrowed and squinting. For one second we focused on each other,

Then traffic moved, but without Bertha's ever acknowledging that there was some one near to whom Needs Mothering. I knew from the girl's actions.

as well as from the man's tell-tale paller, that this must be her convict husband. But on arriving at Aunt Mollie's hotel, a few minutes later, I dismissed it from my mind because of the greater problem which I couldn't dismiss—the prob-lem of my unfairness to Tom

Instead of sending word that the car was waiting and asking Uncle Ned and Aunt Mollie down to join me. I went up to the suite where there are always bowls of old-fashioned flowers, Uncle Ned's per-petual gift to his "bride." The little old lady, radiant in one of her tight-bodiced. full-skirted silks, greeted me with a hug and a kiss.

Then she held me off at arm's locks a mite peaked and worried. You see whether she neds some aromatic or a leetle of my blackberry juice." Uncle Ned came striding out immediately from the inner room as he always does when Aunt Mollie summoned him. He marched over, took my hands in his big ones and led me to the light. Then, after a grave inspection from his deep blue eyes, he marched me back to his

"What this child needs is mothering." he said quickly.

"It is. Oh, it is!" I replied solemnly and with deep conviction.

"I'd like to cry on your shoulder,

"Come on, dearie, cry on your old auntie's shoulder and then let your wise uncle know just what's bothering you so he can tell you what to do," said Aunt Mollie, pulling me down on the big old-fashioned sofa that they had managed to have in A Friendly Warning.

"Once upon a time," I said, "a dear lad I know brought his wife a beautiful pearl ring for a birthday gift. There were three persons there at the time, and circumstances left each of them alone with the valuable jewel. It disappeared. It might have been taken by a servant who swore her inno-

And all in a second I was blurt-"Neddie come here! Our little girl length and called:

Aunt Mollie."

their suite.

ing out my story:

he should have bowed.

features an indistinct blur. Sud-

In a moment or two I realized corner of her eye and trying me as I thought it all over.

the same thing.

to place her.

bility for Daisy's gravely responsible position with Tom whom I felt to be a thief and

By Anne Lisle.

Copyright, 1920, by King Feature Syndicate, cence, or by the man guest who Inc. hadn't any possible motive for taking it. But the wife felt sure that the girl guest was the thief."

"Sure? Sure's a big word. Why was she sure?" asked Uncle Ned.

So-naming no names- I told of Daisy's love of beauty, of her envy and of the three minutes alone with temptation. When I finished, Uncle Ned came over and put his hand under my chin and so he held my face to the grave scrutiny of his

"Judge not, little girl," said he.

"Judge not. It's easy to be wrong.

Some folks ain't fair to our Val.

You wouldn't do anything to fasten now that, or I don't know a thing

Then I told them of the one day remaining before the husband put the law on the criminal's track, and of the position of trust the wife had aided the girl in obtaining. And when I had finished the two old dears were looking at me with grave tenderness in their eyes.

hand between both of his, and looking at her for approval he spoke with no pretense of misunderstanding who was the "wife" of my

"Have you searched all through "Well, we'll call the rest of our afternoon together postponed and you go straight home and search through everything you had on that day. I reckon you'll find your ring, in a pocket or caught in a hem or some place that's so likely you never thought of it at all. But, anyway, we love you for the way unutterably relieved. "I'm going right home, and I feel sure I'll be back here in an hour with the ring

At the door Aunt Mollie added a

"I'm sure my Neddie's right, Anne. We'll see you back with the ring in an hour, and we want you to know, dear, that we are proud you came to us. But we ain't going to make any mention of this confidence ever, nor yet let ourselves figure on who the little girl who might have taken the ring can be unless she needs us some day."

"You dears" I cried. "I know

I'll find my ring. And you've made me very thankful I didn't steal-

(To be continued.)

BOOKS

THE "MODERN PRINTED" BIBLE, Edited by French Strother. New York: Doubleday, i'age & Company.

The "Modern Printed" Bible is an edition of the King James version printed as, modern books are printed, as straight reading matter.

divided naturally into chapters and paragraphs, and is intended for the general reader who wishes to know the Bible as a masterpiece of literature, and to enjoy the full beauty of its imagery and majestic prose without having his eye and his mind interrupted by mechanical aids to the phrase-by-phrase study. This is really the "antique-printed" Bible, for it is not an innovation, but a return to the readable simplicity of the earliest English editions. The Coverdale version, which was the first Bible printed in English in England, was printed with the chapter and paragraph divisions of modern

The "Modern Printed" Bible is

"The World's Work," that the the result of the strong conviction of French Strother, managing editor mass effect and exquisite literary beauty of the Bible are lost to the general reader by the unnatural artifices, short verses, and confusing addition of verse numbers which characterize the book as we see it today. Mr. Strother has personally edited and arranged this modern

Selling Frozen Food.

food sold in shops is frozen, milk in hard chunks.

in the Asiatic territory.

In parts of Siberia most of the

"I believe you're right." I said, you've stood by that girl."

gentle word.

the girl's chance!"

"No, I haven't," I confessed.

your clothes, Anne?

Uncle Ned sat holding Aunt Mollie's blame on an innocent person.

about folks."

in-law,

Mercedes,

The Restless Sex

A Romantic Film Drama With

MARION DAVIES

(Continued from Yesterday.)

Stephanie, and the same indefinable anger possessed him-not directed entirely against anyone, but inclusive of himself, and her, and Grismer, and his own helplessness and isolation.

There seemed to be a number of studios along the block. In a few minutes he saw the number he was looking for.

Four brick dwelling houses had studios on every floor-a rather pretty Colonial effect with green fence painted white. In the quaint vestibule with its classic fanlight and delicate sidelights, he found her name on a letter box and pushed the electric open noiselessly.

on the hight, he saw a door on which was a copper plate bearing the name, "Miss Davis; Miss Quest. The door opened as he touched the knocker; a young girl in stained sculptor's smock stood there regarding him inquiringly, a cigarette between her pretty, clay stained fin-

"Miss--" he checked himself-Mrs. Grismer, I mean?" he asked. The girl laughed. She was brown-eyed, pink-cheeked, compactly and beautifully molded, and her poise and movement betrayed the elacticity of superb health. "She's out just now. Will you come in and wait?" He went in, aware of clay studies on revolving, stands, acedemic studies in unframed canyases, charcoal drawings from the nude, thumb-tacked to the wall-the usual mess of dusty draperies, decrepit nondescript furniture, soiled rugs and cherished objects of art. A cloying smell of plasticine pervaded the place. A large yellow cat, dozing on a sofa, opened one golden eye a little way, then closed indicated a chair and stepped before a revolving table on which was the roughly-modeled sketch of a horse and rider.

Watches Girl Work. She picked up a lump of waxy material, and, kneading it in one hand, glanced absently at the sketch, then looked over her shoulder at Cleland with a friendly, enquiring air:

"Miss Quest went out to see about her costume. I suppose she'll be back shortly." "What costume?" he asked.

"Oh. didn't you know? It's for the Caricaturists' Ball in aid of the Artists' Fund. It's the Ball of the Gods-the great event of the scason and the last. Evidently you don't live in New York." "I haven't, recently.

"I see. Will you have a cigarette?" She pointed at a box on a tea tray; he thanked her and lighted one. As he continued to remain standing, she asked him again to be seated, and he complied. She continued to pinch off little fussing with the sketch, he saw a smile her cheek in profile; and presently she said without turning: "Why did you speak of Stephanie Quest as Mrs. Grismer? We don't,

"Why not? Isn't she?" y, fresh and smooth-skinned as a

"Who are you?" she asked, with that same little hint of friendly about her.

At that the girl's brown eyes flew being seld in long sticks and meat The difficulties of refrigeration which face warmer climates are solved by the weather a fixture in Europe!"

By Robert W. Chambers.

Now, again, his heart was beating hard and fast at thought of seeing The street she lived in was quiet.

been made over into one with shutters, white doorway, and iron button. The street door swung Goes to See Stephanie. On the ground floor, facing him it indifferently.

The girl who had admitted him lumps of waxy, pliable composition and stick them on the horse. Still

The girl looked at him over her shoulder; she was startingly pret-curiosity in her brown eyes-"I'm Helen Davis, Stephanie's chum. You seem to know a good deal "I'm James Cleland," he said, -"her brother.

ide open "Good heavens!" she said; "did Steve expect you? She never said a word to me! I thought you were

Saving Money in the Home; Little Tricks For Women in Household Economics

By Elizabeth Lattimer.

TOTHING is more acceptable to . a thirsty person on a sultry day than some cool and deli-cious beverage. Fortunately, these beverages are not hard to prepare. If the housewife will stock up a small shelf in a convenient pantry with a few bottles of fruit syrups, loganberry juice, grape juice, ginger ale, carbonated waters and dainty accessories in the way of tall, thin glasses, an ice shaver, straws, and so forth, it will take but a very few minutes to brew a delicious "punch." Care should be taken to see that these beverages are not oversweet-ened, for their mission is to quench thirst, instead of inducing it. In many instances the addition of chilled carbonated water greatly improves them, for the life and sparkle of the water seem to impart an added zest. The importance of liquid in one's explains to her

why Don

Julian

has found it necessary to send out of his house

the young poet,

Ernesto,

whom he himself had urged to make his home with him.

He sat biting the end of his ciga-

"She didn't expect me," he said, flinging the half-burned cigarette into the silver slop-dish of the tea-service. "I didn't notify her that I

Helen Davis dropped one elbow on the modeling table, rested her rounded chin in her palm, and bent her eyes on Cleland. Smoke from the cigarette between her fingers mounted in a straight, thin band

"So you are Steve's Jim." she mused aloud. "I recognize you now, from your photographs, only you're older and thinner-and you wear a mustache. . . You've been away a long while, haven't "Too long," he said, casting a "Oh, do you feel that way? How odd it will seem to you to see Steve again. She's such a darling! Quite wonderful, Mr. Cleland. The artists colony in New York raves over ing, so clever, so full of talent and animation-like a beautiful and mischievous thoroughbred on tip-of living. She never is in low spirits or depressed. That's what fascinates everybody-her gayety knew her in college and she wasn't quite that way then. Perhaps be-and energy and high spirits.

"Everybody does. She's so amus-es with vitality and the sheer joy

"Does it?" he said, drily.

rette, not looking at her:

was coming.

to the ceiling.

somber look at her.

diet is underestimated, although continually doctors try to impress people with its necessity for health. Grape juice has its place in every home, for it has proven itself to be really the best foundation for a number of satisfying drinks. Made from the pure, unadulterated and unsweetened juice of the grapes, gathered early in the morning while the dew is still on them, and pressed immediately, the grape juice of a nationally known producer is deli-

Orange drinks may easily and economically be made by adding water to the orange syrup known as orange nip. A gallon jug of this fruit syrup will assure the average housewife of a tasty beverage for family and guests at any time all Lunching Cut of Doors. The European habit of eating out of doors is growing in America. Many country houses have screenedin porches where in pleasant weather the informal meals, like break-fast and tea, and often the formal meals are served. Such porches are often wired for electricity and the meal may be prepared as well as eaten there. But an alcohol chafing dish will serve the same pur-pose. Or, the table may be set with cold dishes, such as sandwiches and at the last moment. If you expect men guests at the afternoon tea table provide plenty of sandwiches and cut down on cakes. Select from the reliable brands of summer specialties, sandwich fillers such as ox tongue, corned beef, summer sausage or ham loaf.

salads, and a single hot dish and tea or coffee brought from the kitchen

Rolled sandwiches are very attractive and quite novel. Cut the bread very thin and brush lightly with melted butter, then spread with a soft filling. Make filling by rubbing cheese or chopped meat to a soft paste and add seasoning to taste. Thin slices of onion, green pepper and a dash of salt and pepper make excellent seasoning. After spreading with the filling roll each slice of bread and secure with a toothpick. Make a mound of these rolled sandwiches in center of plate and garnish with parsley.

A Twentieth Century Santa. Ten years ago no industry existed that was capable of placing Amercan-grown varieties of European grapes upon the market for the Christmas trade. Then a method was devised of packing the grapes in redwood sawdust in veneered drums, and of handling the product under refrigeration in transit and in storage from the time of harvesting until the period of the holiday markets. Today the industry ships more than 500 carloads of grapes annually. A few years ago the supply of cause she hated college. But she red-wood was threatened. Experiments made with various kinds of could be a perfect little devil if she wood demonstrated that spruce wanted to. She can be that still. could be satisfactorily used. The (To Be Continued Tomorrow.) supply of spruce is practically inex-Copyright, 1917, 1918, by the International Magazine Company.) haustible. To the trade the de-

$1 PAID FOR EACH DOLLAR SAVED

Here is a chance for everyone to earn a dollar by telling how she has saved a dollar. It may be a dollar or more. It may have been saved in a day or a week. However, all that matters is HOW it was saved.

$1 saved and $1 earned by the telling of the saving makes $2. How about it! Be brief and write only on one side of paper. I will award a prize of $1 each day for one of the suggestions which I print. If your first letter doesn't get prize, try again. Even if it does, that is no bar to your get-ting another if your idea is Checks will be mailed to win-

ELIZABETH LATTIMER. partment's activities mean uninterrupted business; to the consumer, the continuance of a luscious fruit.

Today's Economy Prize.
DEAR ELIZABETH LATTIMER: Finding the children short of underwaists, I looked over my rag-ber and found two union suits that were too small for any one. Taking an old waist as a pattern I soon had six waists

I bound the edges with scraps of cambric, then sewed on old buttons from the other waists. As the waists cost 55 cents apiece I saved over $3. MRS. W. H. MOORE, 150 Adams street N. W.

Things Not As They Should Be

The world seems to be turned all nside out and upside down the past few years. A lot of things are not as they should be. For instance: The other day a man went in to have his nails fixed and the mani-cure didn't tell him he had beautiful hands; a broker hired a strange young man as messenger boy and sent him to a bank with a million dollars' worth of convertible bonds and the boy arrived at the bank and deposited the bonds; a lady was seen passing a hat store without stopping to look in at the window. a rich corporation willingly paid a woman $1,000 for breaking her leg; a well-known man who has a beautiful stenographer was seen taking his own wife out to lunch; a rich man dies and the distant relatives did not appear to protest his will; a cigar store advertised good 5 cent cigars for a nickel; a lady fell down in the street and seven men rushed to her assistance. Now these things are not as they should be, or as we have always been led to believe they should be. Everything seems to be topsyturvy. What are we coming to?

Is it possible we are coming to our senses?

Toys Most

Profitable Invention. Toys, as a whole, have yielded larger profits than any other class

To keep your face powder on, use Der-willo. No touching up all the time to prevent your nose and face from shining. A dip in the ocean, perspiration hot sun and wind have no effect on it Instantly beautifies the complexion. A single application proves it. All druggists refund the money if it fails.

They end corns now in this scientific way

People who know-millions of them -now end all corns in this way.

They apply Blue-jay, either in liquid or in plaster form. It means but a touch and takes but a jiffy.

The corn pain stops. Then the Bluejay gently undermines the corn so it loosens and comes out.

The modern way

Blue-jay was invented by a chemist who studied corns.

It is made by a laboratory of worldwide repute.

Old-time treatments were harsh and inefficient. Blue-jay is gentle, quick and Now all corns are needless. All these pains can be avoided. To let corns remain while you pare and pad them is folly. You can stop a corn ache the moment it appears. You can end a corn completely before it can develop. Blue-jay has proved these facts to millions. It will prove them to you-and tonight-if you let it. Quit the old methods of dealing with corns and see what this new way means. Your druggist sells Blue-jay.

BAUER & BLACK Chicago New York Toronto Makers of Sterile Surgical Dressings and Allied Products